MAIN IDEA

Habit stacking is a personal productivity strategy where you group together a series of small actions or habits (which take 5 minutes or less to complete) into a regular routine that you follow daily. You then select a trigger which will remind you to work through your habit stack at the right time.

The whole aim of habit stacking is to combine small actions which will generate a chain reaction of positive benefits. Most people tend to view success as an event but the reality is success is always a process. If you can get into the habit of making a small amount of progress towards your most important goals every day, the compound effect can be significant and far reaching.

Integrate small habit stacks into your daily routine and you'll be amazed at how much you can and will accomplish over time.

"The truth is, what you do matters. What you do today matters. What you do every day matters. Successful people ... do things that seem to make no difference at all in the act of doing them, and they do them over and over and over until the compound effect kicks in."

– Jeff Olson, author, The Slight Edge

"If you took the time to talk to any successful person, she would tell you that success is always a process. It's a daily slog where most of your time is spent doing the same thing over and over. Rinse and repeat. Day in and day out. A few wins along the way, and then a few setbacks. Eventually, by working hard, and often for many, many years, you'll become successful. That's the reality of success. It's not luck or an event – just a lot of hard work and daily action. The people who succeed in the game of life understand the important power of small actions."

The whole point of habit stacking is you spark daily actions which will then lead to what you want from life. Not all habits are equal so for a robust and productive habit stack, you need to combine keystone habits, support habits and elephant habits together. Use habit stacking to build powerful routines for your life.

Practice has shown the best way to get started with habit stacking is to develop and use three sets of habit stacks:

1. A morning stack – habits which get you started on being productive each day.

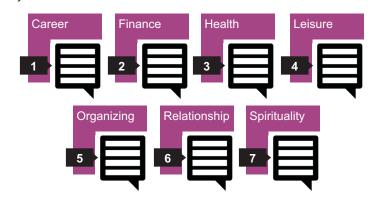

2. A focus stack - habits which enable you to zero in on important projects.

3. An evening stack – habits which wrap up your day and lay a foundation.

To get started with habit stacks, look at developing these three habit stacks first.

There are at least 127 actions or habits you can integrate into your habit stacks to improve your life and career. Identify the habits which resonate with your needs and integrate them into your habit stacks. These actions can be broken down into the seven primary areas of your life:

4. Building lifelong habits

Once you know how to build habit stacks, you can then get busy building as many stacks as you like. The key to building new habits is always consistency and repetition. Specifically, you have to schedule time for your habit stacks, identify your triggers and plan out what you'll do when you complete a stack. Follow the 13 step process for building a habit stacking routine.
